

Ultimate and proximate determinants of aggression in man (and other primates)

Philosophikum, Großer Sitzungssaal (3.0.79)

Thursday, 29 September 2011

9.00 opening

9.15-10.30 P. Hammerstein, Berlin: What theoretical biology has to say on aggression in humans and other primates

11.00-12.15 L. Fisher, Bristol: Game theory in real life

13.15-14.30 C. El Mouden, Oxford: Common misconceptions about the evolutionary explanations for conflict in humans

14.30-15.45 M. Eisner, Cambridge: What causes large-scale variation in homicide across time and societies?

19.00 Dinner (Restaurant Orphée)

Friday, 30 September 2011

9:00-10.15 D. Zinner, Göttingen: Violence among our close relatives – aggression in non-human primate societies

10.45-12.00 L. Andreozzi, Trento: The emergence of social preferences: the case for reciprocity

13.00-14.15 J. Archer, Preston: Human sex differences in aggression from the perspective of sexual selection

14.15-15.30 M. Holler, Hamburg: Is it better to be loved or feared?